Artisans Offer Handmade Wares At Annual Art and Craft Fair

by Leah Cohen and Nicole DeWald

Sparkle Mart, Greenbelt Recreation's annual Juried Art and Craft Fair, will take place at the Community Center on Saturday, December 3 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, December 4 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. with over 70 vendors participating. This year, visitors can shop and mingle with local fine artists, artisans and authors in the Ground Floor East, the gymnasium, first floor classrooms and on the third floor in the ceramic hand-building studio. Signs will be posted to guide visitors to rooms with vendors. All rooms are ADA accessible.

Sparkle Mart artisans will be offering a wide range of handmade wares to add beauty to your daily life or provide the perfect gift for any occasion. There will be pottery made by Greenbelt Recreation ARTS students, instructors and artists in residence, as well as carved wooden utensils and custom cookbooks. Browse among paintings, prints, letterpress cards, photography, soaps, candles, bags and cozy quilts. Try on mittens, hats and scarves and shop for jewelry made from fused glass, wool beads, resin, found objects, polymer clay and metalwork. Find children's clothing, hand-made

Lifeguards Needed at GAFC To Serve Increasing Pool Use

by Susan Taylor

"Lifeguards are the key to the building. I got no lifeguards, I got no building. I can't open the pool," pleads Stephen Parks, Greenbelt Aquatic & Fitness Center (GAFC) supervisor.

As the community begins to recover from the isolation of the Covid-19 pandemic, more individuals are engaging in new and former exercise routines. As the number of swimmers in Greenbelt increases, the GAFC needs more lifeguards.

Recruiting Teens to Elders

Currently, there is a lifeguard shortage, regionally and nationally. Many parents held teens back from working outside the home for safety reasons in the past few years. The GAFC staff wants folks to know they are eager to train and hire lifeguards from 16 through retirement age. Applicants can be 15½ to take the class but must be 16 years old to be hired by the city.

All GAFC employees gain a

News Review Is 85: Serving Community ... & Cake

The News Review will be serving cake from its doorway, next to the gym inside the Community Center this Sunday. The event celebrates 85 years of continuous publication of this community's own newspaper.

As many small newspapers go under, the News Review is still proudly serving Greenbelt.

The cake service starts at 12:30 and runs to 1:30 p.m. (or as long as it lasts), at the same time as the Art and Craft show. Claim a slice before other voracious Greenbelters eat it all up. One slice per person.

Happy Birthday!

Council Hears Maglev Developments, Protects Green Ridge House Funding

by Diane Oberg

On Monday, November 21, the Greenbelt City Council heard updates on what has been happening (or not) with the proposed maglev train. The city had previously submitted comments on the draft environmental impact statement (DEIS) for the Washington to Baltimore portion of the project. Then in late August 2021, the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA), which is overseeing the environmental review, paused the project. But, more recently, there has been evidence that some review is occurring. Council then moved into a closed meeting to obtain legal advice regarding maglev.

But first, council held a special meeting necessitated by changes in the De-

Windsor Green Needs Carriers After Disruption in Delivery

by Cathie Meetre

Hopefully, Windsor Green residents are reading this in a newspaper that just arrived on their doorstep. A few weeks ago, door-to-door deliveries to the condominium townhouse community abruptly stopped when the carrier who had delivered them for almost 20 years resigned the day before publication. Because this carrier worked for the Home Owners Association (HOA), the newspaper itself has not delivered to the complex and couldn't react quickly enough to substitute, nor did it have permission from the HOA to do so. In fact, it was too late to stop the printing and 700 newspapers were recycled.

Permission Granted

After some fast footwork by all concerned and much-appreciated cooperation from Windsor Green's HOA and management company (CVI, Inc.) the News Review now has permission to deliver door-to-door and has rapidly synched up to do so. Three substitute carriers from the current crew are distributing the papers for the first time this week with a rookie starting out for next week. Writing this several days earlier, fingers are crossed for a successful venture.

Calling New Carriers

The News Review would like to recruit carriers from Windsor Green or nearby in Greenbelt East to deliver to Windsor Green. It's simple to apply and each route currently pays $10 per week. The complex will be divided into five routes, each taking between an hour and an hour-and-a-half to complete. Newspaper bundles are dropped off on Thursday mornings for delivery by Friday at 5 p.m., so carriers have some latitude in the actual time of delivery and can work around other commitments. Carriers can be of any age (our oldest was about 90 when he retired). To apply, contact circ@greenbeltnewsreview.com

Future-Proofing

Going forward, the News Review intends to continue deliveries to Windsor Green of a newspaper that is an important element in keeping our city a fine place to live. Not everywhere is

Letters to the Editor

Neither Snow nor Rain ... for 36 Years!

The note, hand delivered, came to many of us not totally unexpected. The word had gone out, plans were being made and it was just a matter of time. Yes, our mail carrier Tony was wrapping his career with the Postal Service. Day-in, day-out, he was on the job – serving our town. Just think of all that walking! And the weather – sheesh!

Dedication, with a dose of professionally friendly chatter. A music fan – with a sidebar into the singer-songwriters of our generation. The names of Buffet (Jimmy, not Warren), Jackson Browne and Eagles come to mind. Tony took care of us on his appointed rounds. Greeting cards, bills, medicines and music were all given priority in his neighborhood sort.

We will say “so long” to Tony on December 30, and wish him and his family glad tidings. Thank you, sir, as you sail “into the mystic.”

Piscataway Are Here

I appreciated Lois Rosado’s article Piscataway People of Maryland: The Original Greenbelters? and its publication at the time that many celebrate Thanksgiving. Every year I am conflicted about gathering with friends on that day, since it is a holiday built on a myth that obscures U.S. history of colonization and attempted genocide of indigenous peoples.

This year at the prompting of an indigenous activist I follow on social media, I donated to four indigenous organizations. Recently I learned that the Cedarville Band of Piscataway Indians, which maintains a museum and cultural center in Waldorf, is calling for land-tax payments for those of us who live on the stolen lands that their people were stewards of.

They say, “Pay because it is part of atonement and the just thing to do for your continued occupancy of our lands.” Land-back is a movement to return indigenous lands to indigenous peoples. I’ve decided to pay monthly land tax to the Cedarville Piscataway people to support their work and their effort to get their land back.

Rosado ends her article by saying the Piscataway people are still here. They are here, and they are calling on us to make financial restitution. In addition to individual contributions, we should take collective action for systemic change as urged by indigenous peoples.

One major issue now is a Supreme Court case that threatens the Indian Child Welfare Act and tribal sovereignty.

Guillermo del Toro’s Pinocchio

Academy Award-winning director Guillermo del Toro and award-winning, stop-motion legend Mark Gustafson reimagine the classic Carlo Collodi tale of the fabled wooden boy with a whimsical tour de force that finds Pinocchio on an enchanted adventure that transcends worlds and reveals the life-giving power of love. The critics’ consensus, according to Rotten Tomatoes: “The film delivers fully on its title – which is to say it’s a visually stunning adaptation that embraces its source material’s darkness.”

Black Panther: Wakanda Forever

In this much-anticipated sequel to Marvel’s first Black Panther film, Queen Ramonda (Angela Bassett), Shuri (Letitia Wright), M’Baku (Winston Duke), Okoye (Danai Gurira) and the Dora Milaje (including Florence Kasumba) fight to protect their nation from intervening world powers in the wake of King T’Challa’s death. As the Wakandans strive to embrace their next chapter, the heroes must band together with the help of War Dog Nakia (Lupita Nyong’o) and Everett Ross (Martin Freeman) and forge a new path for the kingdom of Wakanda.

Community Thanksgiving Dinner Returned to St. Hugh's Parish Hall

by Christopher Irwin

When Cathy Taylor was asked by the St. Hugh Knights of Columbus to provide salad for the parish's annual Thanksgiving Day dinner, she didn't hesitate. Taylor grabbed two very large salad bowls and returned to the church with both bowls filled with tasty greens and other salad fixings.

The Covid-19 pandemic had kept many St. Hugh's parishioners from enjoying the annual Thanksgiving Dinner over the past couple of years, but not this year. The annual event was enjoyed by more than 50 people who gathered together to feast on four turkeys, two hams, marshmallow-sweet-potato casserole, mashed potatoes, green beans, salad and bread. As if this weren't enough, attendees capped their meals with a slice from one of the six enormous pies.

"I think it's wonderful to see our parish come together as a family again to celebrate Thanksgiving," says Taylor. "It's good to see people enjoy a meal together in fellowship." Taylor recalled how difficult things were during the pandemic for many of the elderly. She reflected on the period when people were leery of coming to church, relegated to watching services online, and how life is slowly returning to normal. "I think it's really good and really nice, especially for some of the older folks, to get that socialization again."

"It shows that the parish is strong and has a good community spirit and [that] this church has a lot of good character and a lot of people who work together to make that happen," Taylor added.

She acknowledged how this spirit of community begins with leadership at the top, exemplified by parish priest Rev. Walter Tappe. "He is a constant inspiration," said Chris Irwin, chancellor of the Knights of Columbus at St. Hugh.

Many came to participate and enjoy the Thanksgiving Day meal as St. Hugh's Catholic Church resumes its annual tradition.

lor of the Knights of Columbus at St. Hugh. "Father Tappe has chosen what I think is the best way to lead and motivate, which is by example." Irwin credits Father Tappe with motivating him to get involved with the Knights of Columbus. Taylor says she was motivated to get involved with the "Walking with Purpose" Catholic women's Bible studies and encourages others to join her and her husband Jimmy at the monthly movie nights, summer bingo and the Christmas bazaar, all of which have been returning to their pre-pandemic levels of engagement.

Including October's Youth Group Haunted House and December's Christmas Bazaar, the Thanksgiving Day dinner is one of many community-oriented events that has been put on by the St. Hugh parish this year.

Restoration Center Church Celebrates International Day

On Sunday, October 16, Restoration Center Church, located in Roosevelt Center, held an International Day celebration with the theme "Unity in Diversity." The celebration showcased different cultures, ethnic groups and tribes. Attendees came in their traditional dress. Songs in diverse languages, cultural dances, ethnic dishes and shared stories of the countries represented were the highlight of the day. "This event revealed the similarities and uniqueness that make us one in the sight of God," said Minister Ify Ogra.

The mission of the Restoration Center Church is to restore hope and transform lives in our community and around the world. Everyone is welcome, regardless of personal history, family background, ethnicity or gender.

Veterans Day Remembrance at Peace Cross

by Butch Hicks

Each year at the Greenbelt War Memorial, Veterans Day ceremonies feature American Legion, city, county and state leaders commenting on the day’s importance. The event honors veterans who died and veterans who served or continue to serve their country. This year Veterans Day had particular significance for Greenbelt American Legion Post 136 and, by association, the Greenbelt community. Post 136 Commander Greg Gigliotti said the rededication of the World War I Peace Cross memorial at Bladensburg again tied the Greenbelt community and its veterans together because the Post was established by WWI veterans who lived in Greenbelt. “Our veterans’ recognition ceremonies each year emphasize the post’s birth through the efforts of Greenbelt WWI veterans and our continuing ties to the community,” he said.

The 40-foot-high Peace Cross went up 97 years ago to memorialize 49 Prince George’s County men who died in France in WWI. Its base reflects their service in the words Devotion, Valor, Courage and Endurance.

After numerous court hearings brought by opponents of the Peace Cross who said there was an issue with the First Amendment’s separation of church and state, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the message of the Peace Cross was not unconstitutional and it could remain in its location.

Post 136 collaborated with organizations such as the Rolling Thunder riders, other Legion Posts and citizens in raising funds to rehabilitate the memorial for the rededication ceremony led by Maryland Governor Larry Hogan. Emphasizing his support for the Peace Cross memorial, Hogan said, “And so on this Veterans Day, as we rededicate this Bladensburg Peace Cross, we also rededicate ourselves to continue honoring the sacrifices of the 49 heroes immortalized here and all of the brave Marylanders who have ever worn the flag of our nation on their arm and who put their lives on the line to protect the rights and the freedoms that we all hold so dear.”

Maryland Governor Larry Hogan and representatives of The American Legion were joined by Rolling Thunder members, state and local government leaders and hundreds of citizens at the rededication of the Peace Cross World War 1 memorial in Bladensburg.

partment of Housing and Urban Development's (HUD) SAM (system for award management). Despite Green Ridge House (GRH) having received HUD funding since 1979, the department was now demanding evidence that GRH is a city entity. So, council suspended its rules to pass a resolution declaring that GRH is indeed a city entity. Without this resolution, the city's funding from HUD could be endangered, according to Interim City Manager Timothy George. Suspension of the rules was needed to provide time to accommodate any potential problems by the HUD deadline. The resolution passed unanimously as did suspension of the rules.

Maglev

The city has received no official reports of maglev-related action. Andrea Gelatt, of Jill Grant and Associates, the city's law firm handling maglev-related issues, reported that a condemnation trial involving land needed for the Baltimore terminus of the system, which had been expected to start soon, had been postponed by order of the court. No revised trial date was available.

Jill Grant reported that the Maryland Court of Special Appeals had determined that Baltimore-Washington Rapid Rail (BWRR) had a railroad franchise and, as such, has a right to exercise eminent domain. Grant has not yet researched what would be involved in doing so, as BWRR has not yet proposed to exercise that right against any Greenbelt land. She opined, however, that BWRR would likely have to demonstrate that any taking would be in the public interest. She said that the company would need permission from Baltimore.

Unknowns

There are several unknowns regarding maglev. The city will have a new congressional representative, Glenn Ivey, and new governor, Wes Moore, and their views are not yet known, although Moore had indicated that maglev was not a priority for him. Grant noted that the new Transportation law favors certain infrastructure projects, but that there have been so many maglev project problems in other jurisdictions that it is hard to know how the government now views the project.

Dr. Owen Kelley, who referred to himself as an adjunct of the Maryland Coalition for Responsible Transit (MCRT), reported on a colloquium at Goddard Space Flight Center with BWRR. At that meeting, Ian Rainey, a senior vice president of BWRR, expressed confidence that the system will be built and that an environmental statement would be issued. Kelley said that during the symposium Tomoaki Seki, general manager of the Maglev Systems Development Division of the Central Japan Railway Company, described the complexities of the system and that they are seeking to redesign the entire method.

Kelley described his conversation with two colloquium participants, one of whom was excited by the prospect of being able to ride on the system, the other who expressed concern that the system was too complex to be financially viable.

Pat Jackman, current treasurer and one of the founding members of MCRT, said that they are anticipating that a supplemental Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) will be issued soon, replying to the comments submitted regarding the DEIS. Jackman also reported that the Anacostia Watershed Community Advisory Committee had found out that the Maryland Department of the Environment is preparing a Tier II water analysis of Beaver Dam Creek that is being paid for by BWRR.

PR Efforts

Several speakers reported that BWRR and its sister company Northeast Maglev are participating in a number of public events and distributing promotional items plugging the system. Councilmember Ric Gordon noted that they have a strong presence on social media building support by promising jobs.

The Northeast Maglev Facebook page provides several examples including a turkey give-away and an event in South Baltimore where "we raced mini-Maglevs and taught about superconductivity using liquid nitrogen."

After about an hour of discussion, council went into closed session to discuss maglev-related legal issues with its attorneys.

season approaches. Davis said she thought the police did have homicide investigation powers in the city but Greenbelt Road and Kenilworth Avenue are not city property so the county takes over for homicides there. George will talk with the police chief to clarify the issue and get back with more information.

Petitions

Greenbelt resident Bill Orleans requested that the Ethics Commission report be reviewed by the city solicitor. Davis added the item to the council meeting's agenda and moved that the city manager ask the city solicitor to review the city ethics ordinance and disclosure form so that they meet state requirements. The motion by Davis passed unanimously.

Third vehicle front driver-side window broken, personal property stolen.

Indecent Exposure Arrest Tuesday

A man was charged with indecent exposure after two women reported that he exposed his genitalia in a public spot. On November 29 at approximately 9 a.m., Greenbelt Police officers responded to the parking lot of Buddy Attick Lake Park. The suspect was no longer there, but the caller was able to give a detailed description of the suspect and the car he was driving. A short time later, officers located the car and initiated a traffic stop. The driver, 45-year-old Jamie Lee White of Hyattsville matched the description, was positively identified and arrested.

free membership to the facility, as well as their paycheck. New lifeguards are required to take the Red Cross training course to be certified, which is offered at the GAFC. Once someone is hired and has served as a guard for a while, the GAFC will refund the cost of the course.

A Form of Life Fitness

Training to be a life guard requires physical fitness, the ability to exercise good judgment and the desire to provide public safety at the pool. Life guarding provides other learning opportunities – it’s a great way for young folks, veterans and retirees to learn to be leaders.

Lifeguard and pool manager David Jesser explains, “Young folks have an opportunity to serve in leadership roles, to have responsibilities, a decent paying job and gain a very nice reference for college and other jobs.” As a retiree Jesser stated, “Lifeguarding gives you an opportunity to be doing something productive in your community, the extra pay is helpful to my pension, and it keeps my wife from strangling me.”

How to Apply

For more information call the GAFC at 301-397-2204 or apply online at the city’s Human Resources website: greenbeltmd.gov/government/city-administration/human-resources/current-job-openings.

The Holiday Farmers Market Has Fine Foods and Festivity

by Cathie Meetre

The Farmers Market celebrates the first year since 2020 when things have been anything like normal. Though many wear masks, just as many don't, and the access control, tape and fencing of 2020 and 2021 were mercifully absent. With music, crepes and kids in the market this year, it began to feel like Greenbelt again.

This coming Sunday, December 4, heralds the final market of the season. The Holiday Market runs during the Art and Craft Fair from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and is the last chance for vendors to show off their wares and Greenbelters to stock up. With more latitude than the regular market, farmers who also produce craft items bring them to the market – and many is the item you can buy and freeze for upcoming winter celebrations.

The Daily Round

Barnola's organic and inventive granolas are the perfect start for brekkie. And for those with a sweet tooth, Simple Pleasures Ice Cream, Strib'ble Treats, Martha's Jams, Mel's Munchies and Night Owl Vegan have all they need.

Balancing self-indulgence with yummy for the tummy fruit and veggies, there's Fajardo's Produce, King Mushrooms, Pat Hochmuth Farm, Shlagel Farms, Woodland Harvest, Three Springs Fruit Farm, Owl's Nest Farm and Metro Microgreens – it's a cornucopia!

The Farmers Market, let it be said, does not eschew the proteins! Representing this vital and delicious food group are Ferguson Family Farm, St. Michaels Oysters and Two Oceans True Foods/Carriage House Farms. Greenbelters are assured of three delicious courses prepared in their own kitchens.

Grab and Go

But sometimes, there's a need for speed – and this is where the prepared food vendors are ready for action. Plan a pizza? Try Tag Team Kitchen's pizza kits for a quick at-home meal with a delicious crust and homemade sauces ready to bake.

Pop-up Patisserie and Stone Hearth Bakery play a vital role on the side plate with fresh and frozen breads, pies and croissants. El Piquin's patient line of those looking for freshly made-on-the-spot crepes stays constant almost the whole market, and Roy and RT's Kitchen & Garden features delicious curries and Indonesian fusion dishes ready to take home or eat on the spot for lunch.

Libation Nation

But what to drink? The Market has it covered. Jubilee Fermentations' firkins of beer offers different brews to sample while Elk Run Winery never fails to prove that Maryland's no piker when it comes to wines. And to round it all off, what better than a delicious cup of coffee and a supply of beans for the larder from Zeke's Coffee.

Then after a lovely meal, stretch out and relax with an aromatherapy experience. Surin Aromas nurtures wellness with candles, wax melts, soaps and body oils.

Regifting Opportunity

The participating community group is Greenbelt Buy Nothing, which will have a 'regifting table' where market-goers may donate or select items suitable for giving, perhaps earlier received as generous but off-target gifts.

If Music Be the Food

Perhaps the most fun thing about the market will be the Pandemic Sisters and Dave. Few communities worldwide have their own ukulele band (though one of the Sisters' major competitors, The Ukulele Orchestra of Great Britain, is performing Tchaikovsky at Strathmore in May, and for that one must pay). Greenbelt, however, is fortunate. With verve, panache, rhythm and wreathed in smiles, the group covers a variety of musical genres focusing this time on carols and holiday tunes, especially those requiring a minimum of chords and a maximum of spirit. And it's free.

The event is sponsored through the generosity of the Greenbelt Co-op Supermarket and Pharmacy.

Old Greenbelt Theatre Shows Holiday Movies

by Debra Cope

Three upcoming holiday flicks at the Old Greenbelt Theatre are sure to please, starting this Friday night, December 2.

How the Grinch Stole Christmas

In collaboration with Greenbelt Recreation at the Annual Tree Lighting in Roosevelt Center, a free showing of How the Grinch Stole Christmas will begin after Santa's visit.

Based on the children's story by Dr. Seuss, this movie features a mean, green, revenge-seeking grouch intent on cancelling Christmas for the citizens of Whoville. Knowing their love for the holiday, the Grinch steals gifts and decorations from their homes on Christmas Eve. Watch how the Grinch's heart opens to the true nature of giving with the help of a little girl.

Showtime: Friday, December 2, following Santa's visit in Roosevelt Center. Annual tree lighting begins at 7 p.m. Free.

Christmas in Connecticut

Starring Barbara Stanwyck and Dennis Morgan, this 1945 holiday comedy is one not to miss. As the story goes, the famous food columnist Elizabeth Lane (Barbara Stanwyck) writes under the persona of a hard-working farmer's wife and mother with fabulous cooking skills. In reality, she's a single, childless journalist living in New York City who can't boil water.

The table turns when her unsuspecting publisher Alexander Yardley (Sydney Greenstreet) sees the opportunity for a publicity stunt by inviting the returning war hero Jefferson Jones (Dennis Morgan) to her country home for a traditional family Christmas. Now, Elizabeth must scramble to hide the truth. Enjoy the hilarity at her "husband's" farm where Elizabeth assumes the guise of loving wife and doting mother, a complete novice in such roles.

Showtime: Monday, December 5 at 1 p.m. Free.

Elf Brings Snowball Fight to Greenbelt

What if as a toddler one had been transported to the North Pole and raised among Santa's elves? In the 2003 feature film Elf, that's precisely what happened to Buddy (Will Ferrell). After discovering his origins, the adult Buddy heads to New York City in search of his real father – in full elf uniform!

With DNA proof of parenthood, the cynical businessman Walter Hobbs (James Caan) reluctantly agrees to begin a relationship with his guileless son Buddy with uproarious results. Frequently listed among the greatest Christmas films of all time, this American Christmas comedy will delight all.

And the snowball fight? Warm many hearts by donating new gloves, socks and hats for those who are un-homed in Baltimore. During the snowball scene in the movie, movie-goers will be prompted to hurl donations around the theater. After the movie, OGT staff will collect them to be donated to #HashtagLunchbag in Baltimore. This nonprofit empowers everyday people in their local communities to spread love and fill hungry stomachs by providing kits with food, water, and necessities for those in need.

Showtime: Saturday, December 17, late morning (time TBD). Regular ticket pricing applies.
